Natural Gas Keeping Power Prices High

WE ALL KNOW HOW IT GOES in Texas: When the summer temperatures start to soar, the power bill often follows. Running the air conditioner comes with a price, and we can only do our best to soften the blow—keeping the front door closed, fans on and the stove off.

But this year, forces beyond any of us are poised to make summer electric bills even worse.

You may have already noticed that the price you pay for power has gone up. Hamilton County Electric Cooperative didn't raise our rates, but the runaway cost of natural gas is having a nasty effect on electric bills across Texas. The cost your co-op pays for wholesale power has been much higher this year, and there's no relief on the horizon.

Since the winter storm in February 2021 that impacted most of our state's grid, prices for natural gas—which fuels about half of Texas' power generation—have risen sharply. Natural gas cost an average of $1.91 per million Btu in February 2020 but $4.69 in February of this year—nearly 2.5 times higher. The Energy Information Administration expects those prices to stay north of $3.50 through 2023.

That means most electric generation and transmission providers are paying far more to generate power—costs that get passed along to Hamilton County EC and that we unfortunately must pass along to our members. We do that through the power cost recovery factor that's built into your bill.

Don't get me wrong: We're not happy about this either. Some distribution co-ops are paying as much as 90% more for wholesale power, a frustrating reality that co-ops unfortunately have no control over. All of your cooperative's directors and most of its employees, like me, are members of the co-op. Our power bills are impacted by this, too.

As a nonprofit electric cooperative, none of this extra money goes to the co-op; it passes right through to our power provider. The power cost recovery factor on your bill simply ensures that we can continue to pay our bills and provide power to homes and businesses.

We know times are hard right now, and this is the last thing you want to hear as the summer months start to heat up. Everything costs more these days.

But the old math still applies: Less power still costs less. With increased vigilance this summer, you can stay ahead of these increased costs.

For more help with conservation tools and tips, visit texascooppower.com/energy. Every kilowatt saved helps—now more than ever.

By working together as friends, neighbors and colleagues, we've made it through some challenging times over the past couple of years. We'll get through this, too. ■

What is the power cost recovery factor (PCRf) charge on my electric bill?

Hamilton County EC's Power Provider

Our power provider buys the fuel to generate the power you use.

Hamilton County EC

The cost of the fuel passes through to member-customers with no markup or profit.

Your Electric Bill

The PCRf charge on your bill reflects the fluctuating cost of fuel used to produce the power you use.

Summertime Saving Strategies

ANOTHER LONG, HOT Texas summer is on its way. Here are several ways to use energy more efficiently and save money on electricity during the months ahead.

Change your air conditioning system's filter every three months during cooling season—or more if your neighborhood is especially dusty. Dirty filters stop air from flowing through, which causes your AC to work harder—and use more energy—as it keeps your home cool.

If you have a programmable thermostat, have it run the AC only during part of the day. There's no need to keep your house comfortable if nobody's in it. Running the AC at night could be less expensive than cranking it up during the day, when it's hot and demand for electricity is at its peak.

Use ceiling fans. If you don't have any, consider it a good investment. Install them in bedrooms, the kitchen and the living room. Fans move the air around, cooling people nearby. They might allow you to nudge the AC a degree or two higher.

Close the drapes. A sunny day might be pretty to look at through a window, but hot rays can heat the air in your home and force the AC to work overtime. Keep curtains and blinds closed on bright, hot days—especially on south- and west-facing windows.

If you have a pool, wait until after dark to run your pool pump. Operating it during off-peak hours when fewer people are using a lot of appliances at once can save money on your energy bill.

Switch your central air conditioning system's fan to "auto." The "on" setting forces it to run constantly—even when your house is already cool. ■

Don't Fuel the Fire

Wildfires start unexpectedly and can move quickly and unpredictably, destroying everything in their path.

If fire is reported nearby:

Place vital records and small items of value in your car and park it facing the direction of escape. Heed evacuation orders.

Clear a firebreak around buildings.

Shut gas off at the meter and turn off propane tanks.

Leave the electricity on, especially if it powers a well.

Turn on sprinklers. Wet down the house and shrubs close to structures.

Prevention:

Mow grass short. Rake leaves. Clear away debris.

Keep hay bales and firewood away from structures and electric lines.

Make a family evacuation plan. Have an inventory of home valuables in fireproof box.

Hamilton County EC encourages you to always practice safety.

Restoring Power Safely and Efficiently

FOR MOST Hamilton County Electric Cooperative members, outages are rare and only last a few hours. But when major storms impact our area, extended outages are unavoidable. Hamilton County EC is ready to restore power as safely and efficiently as possible.

When it's safe, our crews start by repairing power lines and equipment that will restore power to the greatest number of people in the shortest time possible.

This process begins with repairs to the larger main distribution lines that service a great number of homes and businesses. After that, crews work on tap lines, which deliver power to transformers. Finally, individual service lines that run between transformers and homes are repaired.

We can't control the weather, but we can prepare for it. Hamilton County EC keeps a supply of extra utility poles, transformers and other equipment on hand so we can quickly get to work in the event of an outage. When widespread outages occur, multiple crews will be out in the field working to repair damage at multiple locations. We also coordinate with nearby co-ops to bring in additional crews when necessary. ■
